

P.S. I received the Folkdance which you sent.

[REDACTED]
Bennett, Seton.

8.3.58

Dear Tom,

What an enjoyable weekend we had at in London. After you left Cecil Sharp House, I bought some records and books, spending the rest of my Christmas presents and quite a lot more besides!, and wandered down to Waterloo just in time for a train back here. Since then I have been absorbed with mathematics and have left all other paper work on one side.

However, I have danced a little. The 'ambition' was just as abominable as I expected.
Do you remember the glassy floor at St Georges Hall?
(wasn't it a Youth Hostel Association Dance)? The floor at the Royal Pier ballroom is rather like that. We waited ages for the M.C. to find the record of the grand march for our entry. After another long wait the music for the first dance blared out and we skid merrily about the room. The audience cheered madly everytime someone just saved themselves from falling. There was obvious anticipation of a solution of the problem of what a Scotsman wears. They called loudly for an encore ; which I suggested should be done an hour later - and beat a hasty retreat.

Since then I have danced twice - once at an EFDSS party where I met the bairnman of Winchester Morris, and once with the Winchester Morrismen. They are not top notch, but they are vigorous and a really enthusiastic crowd. So there you are - my long wait is over and my third grandmother is temporarily in methballs. However, I am still teaching some Highland Solo.

Enclose an advert of some interest.

Yours Frank.

28.33
The Times : No 3736

Wed. Nov 9, 1796.

Dancing. — Private Tuition. — Ladies and Gentlemen who have never been instructed in Dancing, or have been taught in a style now out of practice, may privately and expeditiously acquire the most elegant variety of the present favourite Scotch and Irish Steps, with all the fashionable Requisites of Dancing, at Wilson' and Al... Academies, No 42 Haydon Square, Monories; and No 33, Wardour Street, Soho. Those who reside in the Country, or belong to the Navy, and can spare but a short time in the Town, may receive constant Instructions till perfect; and if they particularly like it, may be accommodated with Apartments in the House, and Board with the Family during their Accomplishments. — Fencing and Music taught. — Schools punctually attended — The Weekly Subscription Assembly will shortly commence.

[The name of Wilson's partner was illegible.]