

8) Miss Milligan learnt her dancing from her mother, who learnt it from her grandmother. But in D.G.M.'s opinion, the dancing she learnt this way was "bad dancing".

On The Dances of Scotland. Max Parrish, as the Ass't Editor, wrote to Atholl Robertson to ask if he could suggest an expert on Highland dancing. A.R. suggested D.G.M., & they wrote to ask him for his dances. He sent them off & they weren't too pleased with them. The Ass't Editor visited him & asked him questions about history, & that was all he did. Very surprised & rather indignant to find his name bracketed with Miss Milligan on the cover.

On William McK. Died 1882 at the age of 32. Trained as an architect, Queen's Prize man. First class draughtsman, and a more than able oil-painter. Pipes & Dances. Taught by old John McNeill.